HOW TO MAKE $1 BILLION

BETTING ON HORSES
FEATURES

50 The People Call Him AMLO
López Obrador, likely to be Mexico's next president, is a populist, but no Trump

56 A World Without Ads
Most of us see sales pitches everywhere. One online community doesn't

60 How to Make $1 Billion Betting On Horses
Bill Benter devised a foolproof algorithm for the racetrack
IN BRIEF
Executive shuffle at Facebook; Nestlé and Starbucks
Next week in Jerusalem; will Tencent’s profit shrink?
A better fix for the EU’s data-protection crisis

REMARKS
Amazon’s golden opportunity to boost diversity

BUSINESS
Abu Dhabi wants to expand beyond crude—way beyond
Corporate bullies could be the next workplace pariahs

TECHNOLOGY
Facebook bans terrorist pages, but they keep returning
Space is getting crowded. Transponders can help
How Flipkart flipped—and won $16 billion from Walmart
Yesterday’s shipping container is today’s TerraFarm

PERSONAL FINANCE
Risk parity, the complex new way to diversify
Annuities are pricey, difficult, and underutilized
The bull market shows signs of exhaustion
PayPal, Apple Pay, and other phone buttons slug it out

ECONOMICS
Indicators flash red, but we’re not overheating (yet)
As Western companies abandon Iran, China steps up
Brazil needs money, but privatization is a tough sell

POLITICS
The Democrats’ un-Tea Party-like bid to win back power

James Comey on Trump vs. his old grocery store boss
Women in Congress could see huge strides in 2018

Pursuits
Now’s the time to plan next year’s Caribbean retreat
Can Dominica become the first climate-resilient nation?
Critic: Baha Mar is open, and business is booming
The One: Shiseido’s sunscreen laughs at water
Game Changer: Bill Drayton’s squad of world fixers

Correction
The graphic for “Can Laws Make Us Equal?” (Features, May 7) suggested that Australia doesn’t mandate paid parental leave. The country’s 2010 Parental Leave Act mandates leave and pay for the primary caregiver.